In the U.S., 500 million plastic straws are used every day and many of those straws and stirrers end up in the environment, according to Better Alternatives Now, or BAN 2.0, an analysis done by several pollution research groups. We know that plastic, once added to the ocean, does not decay for decades, possibly centuries. It is constantly increasing.

While many individual businesses, nonprofits, and schools have opted to ban straws, here are the cities and states that are tackling the issue:

- New York City, Hawaii, and California have pending straw ban legislation.
- California: Alameda, Carmel, San Luis Obispo, Davis, Malibu, Manhattan Beach, Oakland, Richmond, and Berkeley
- Washington: Seattle and Edmonds
- New Jersey: Monmouth Beach
- Florida: Miami Beach and Fort Myers
Green Planet, the maker of durable, eco-friendly, compostable and biodegradable products offers a full line of sustainable products. Green Planet’s products are certified FSC by the Forest Stewardship Council. This certification shows consumers that our products are produced in an environmentally, economically, and socially responsible way.
